The Charlotte Library opened in 1998. The beautiful space and friendly atmosphere continue to welcome patrons and to sustain library staff. However, one aspect of the library infrastructure is in desperate need of upgrading: the staff furnishings. The two stools at the library circulation desk were purchased with the other original furniture nearly 20 years ago and now pose safety and ergonomic concerns. The adjustment levers on both stools no longer lock in place and the stools move without warning. In addition, the padding and the back rests are worn out and do not provide appropriate support. The same conditions apply to our office task chairs which were purchased about 15 years ago. The back support on both of the task chairs is unreliable and moves without warning while staff sit in them. In addition to seating, we would also like to upgrade our computer monitor stands. Currently, we are using books to bring the monitors up to eyesight level. Using monitor risers would ensure the monitors are the correct height for use by library staff.
